

“The Deadly Trade’s finely wrought plot kept me guessing until the end. Natalie Sinclair is a fearless advocate for animal rights, but also with a heart for wounded humans. A great read!” – New York Times bestselling author Patricia Crisafulli

Natalie Sinclair has dedicated her life to animal rescue. From lost dogs and cats to lab rabbits and pigs, Nat and her team of volunteers at All Creatures Great and Small will do almost anything to keep animals out of harm’s way. When a freak accident results in the death of her beloved horse, and the man responsible ends up murdered, Nat is a natural suspect. Worse, she has caught the attention of the dead man’s brother, whose wealth and unsavory connections run deep, including a link to a dangerous ring of criminals trafficking in wild animals.

Suddenly, Nat’s problems are much greater than breaking up lab tests on animals or finding her own missing dog. To clear her name, she’s going to have to take risks she’s never taken before and confront people she’d much rather avoid – including those closest to her. As her professional and personal life crumbles around her, and the stakes surrounding the murder become more and more dangerous, Nat will have to act with extreme daring or else she, not the animals, will be the one in need of rescue.

“A deep read with family drama, multiple mysteries, and a complex main character, Natalie Sinclair, who is passionate about animal rights.” – Goodreads review

“Kyle masterfully weaves together mystery, suspense, and advocacy in a thought-provoking and heart-pounding thriller.” – C.S. O’Cinneide, author of Eve’s Rib

“Readers will love Kyle’s spirited hero Natalie Sinclair and her brave band of animal rescuers.” – Robert Rotenberg, bestselling author of Downfall